Most European students would come and study “free” at a State School. At an English State School you need to study until you are at least 18. You can not leave full time education before this time. There are many excellent state schools so do not think that because you are not paying, that the school education system is inferior. This is simply not true! If students stay on until they are 18 it is usually because they take A levels – Advanced Levels and want to attend University. Otherwise they look for a job or go to vocational colleges.

Your High School in England will be one looked after by the UK Education Authorities so you know that they will follow an agreed and recognised curriculum. They will have standards and performances to meet and this ensures that the school in England you study in, fits all the right criteria to help you progress in English. Lessons will include all of the important subjects such as English, Mathematics, Science, History, Geography, Foreign Languages and of course Sport, Music, Drama and “cooking” for fun.
